William H. Ingersoll, of the firm of Roger H. Ingersoll and Bros. , of New York, declared that many failures of small retailers are due to price-cutting. He took issue with the cases decided in a few courts by which effort has been made to legalize the practice on the ground that the buyer of merchandise has a right to set the price for resale. He contended that as a manufacturer of a standard article has also provided the buyer with a market which he has developed at his own expense, he should still have interest enough left in the goods to prevent their being sold at prices that will harm his market. He strongly urged support of the Stephens bill. He advocated the co-operation of business men in all lines in seeking the reasons for waste and loss. Edward...
