Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Teaching of English at the Universities There are now in this United Kingdom and in other English speaking countries a great number of Professors of the English language and of English literature. Not so very long ago there were none. Yet the art of writing English had been practised with some trifling success for many generations before the first professor appeared. This reflexion may serve to keep us humble who belong to the teaching profession. One might hastily draw the inference that there is no necessity to teach English at all, at the Universities or elsewhere. But I do not think that inference would be safe. Things used to manage themselves in the old days. Now we have undertaken to manage things, and they no longer run alone. We must go on managing them, and manage them as well as we can. Some day, perhaps, we shall learn to manage them better than they used to manage themselves. It would be hazardous for an amateur - and in this field I am but an amateur - to lay down lines of English teaching for those who have made it their life-work. To mention one danger alone, I cannot pretend to know what all of them are doing; still less, what all of them have done. The hasty critic might be silenced by one or other of these replies: I have done that all my life; I have tried that and it failed. And yet it would not be safe to omit from the survey what is common practice; it is also sometimes worth while to repeat an unlucky experiment. From a more lowly position...
