My opinion is that on the farm you must have as much practical work as possible. 684. You think we will be compelled to retain the services of men capable of teaching science on the farms?--Yes. 685. And you think it is possible to devise some scheme?--Yes. 686. And the memorandum we have asked you to put in, you will mention that scheme?--Yes. 687. And in whatever scheme you devise you will make provision for what we call Higher Education ?--Yes. It is necessary because if you take the present state of the Colony you will find that we have to depend almost wholly upon outsiders for our technically trained agricultural experts such as creamery managers, viticulturists, etc. Therefore I strongly advocate training young men to be teachers. 688. That statement is a full reply as to the advisability of sending pupils to Europe? I quite agree that It is necessary to send some pupils to Europe, especially in such a subject as viticulture, but I do not think it is desirable to go in for an indiscriminate system of sending young men to other countries. 689. Do you not think that after we develop these colleges we could give scholarships and bursaries so that we could really attain the ideal of having our young men educated?--Yes. 690. Everything points to the great necessity of having things done in the country?--Yes. 691. Mr. van Heerden. You are in favour...
