Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: .of results takes account of the conditions said to precede actual cancer, such as tobacco blisters, white spots and sore places about the teeth. While there is difference of opinion as to the bearing of such conditions on the development of true cancer it cannot be denied that in many cases a causal relation seems to exist. In using the term precancerous lesions, however, and in considering the result of operations to remove them, it is wise to make the reservation that these conditions are not always followed by the development of true cancer, and the statistics should be understood in that light. In operations on the tongue the figures show that the prompt removal of the precancerous or benign lesion resulted in 100 per cent. of cures. In the second stage, i. e., that of malignant warts, complete removal was equally effective. But when the actual figures of developed cancer were studied, the proportion of cures dropped at once to 50 per cent. In cancer of the breast the danger of delay is equally apparent. In the milder form, called adenocarcinoma, the percentage of cures in all cases was 76, but in the late cases, i. e., those in which the cancerous nature of the tumor was already obvious to the eye, the percentage was but 64. In the early cases, on the other hand, it was 100 per cent. In these early cases there is a warning lump in the breast, but no outward...
