Clearing the Air in Our National Parks Yellowstone poor good Rocky Mountains You might not expect air pollution in our national parks, especially since many are far from big cities and polluting industries. However, air pollution carried far from its sources has caused major poor reduction in visibility in some of our good best-loved national parks. The Clean Air Act has provisions for reducing regional haze, air pollution that reduces visibility in the national parks. To learn more, visit Big Bend www.epa.gov/visibility. These photos show how good and bad the visibility can be at national parks from coast to coast. You can see real-time pictures of visibility at several national parks by visiting the National poor Park Service Website, www.nps.gov/good Air resource specialists at the national parks - rangers who specialize in air pollution - present visitor programs, participate in air pollution monitoring and research, and provide information to visitors interested in air quality.
